LONDON DOCKLANDS HOUSING REVIEW

The story of the housing boom in Docklands is chronicled in the 278-page London Docklands Housing Review 1988, published by Lionprint Publishing Ltd with the support and co-operation of the London Docklands Development Corporation (LDDC).

With a foreword by the Rt Hon William Waldegrave, MP, the book is a collection of key interviews together with articles contributed by virtually every housing developer in Docklands. It details over 200 sites - from the very first 600 houses built in Beckton in 1982 to the present-day proposals for 7,000 units in the Royal Docks.

It also includes interviews with LDDC Chairman, Sir Christopher Benson, and Chief Executive, Michael Honey, who highlight the benefits that the new housebuilding programme has brought to Docklands.
